· INSPIRATION AND SUPPORT FOR COLLEGE TEACHING ·

This web site contains information about the Wakonse Conference on Teaching. We hope this information will be useful to you personally, or in recruiting colleagues from your institution who would benefit from the Wakonse experience. Also available on the site is the general format for the past year's program.

Please keep in mind that this represents only a small part of what becomes the final program. All participants are surveyed before the conferences as to topics they would like to have included. Their topics become an important part of the total program.

The aim of the conference is to bring good teachers together to learn from one another in a supportive environment where they can rekindle the spirit for teaching.

Should you be interested in attending or sending a team to this year's conference, watch this site in the spring for registration. Enrollment is limited . We seek a balance in type and size of schools represented. The fee covers registration, room, board and materials. You provide your own transportation to and from the conference.

We encourage participants to come as a team representing their institution. We believe this makes for a more lasting impact. However, some come as a representative of their institution the first time and return the next year as a member of a team. We limit enrollments to around 100 at the conferences and usually have representatives from 12-15 colleges or universities and high schools.

Registration for the conference will be done online. If you have questions or need printed copies of the conference materials, please contact me at the phone, fax, email, or address below.

Be sure and check this web site for pictures and information updates.

Sincerely,

Joseph A. Johnston, Ph.D.
Director, Wakonse Foundation
